(Though this poem reminds us so vividly of Tom Hood as to suggest imitation, it is, on the whole, quite a clever production. We have taken the lib-erty of reducing its eight-line strophes to four, be-the ring that much better than the form in which it appeared in the Democrat.

Women in Europe and America - Truc and False Ladyhood. Adam Gurowski, who is furnishing some of his experience in America to the New York Saturday Press, relates the following: While riding in an omnibus, one day, a well-dressed young woman reached out her hand to me in rather a commanding manner, but without a breath of explanation, or the least softening expression on her counten-ance. I understood the imperative gesture only when another gentleman took some money from her hand and passed it up to the driver.

All this looked very strange to me.

European women, of all nations and classes, when they ask or require a service, do so not only courteously, but with a pleasant expression of face and acknowledge the service in the same spirit. From the Queen on the throne to the humblest peasant girl, this is invariably the case. this is invariably the case.

I had often read and heard that every woman in America was a lady. I had seen in the shop-windows "A Lady Wanted." All this is well; but a woman thus become a lady ought to preserve her womanhood; that is, to remain the same soft and graceful being which nature intended. I met with several adventures similar to the above.

While going to a morning reception in Roston, I saw a carriage stop before the house, and a "lady" descend from it. As it was raining violently I respectfully offered my umbrella. The "lady" pushed it aside with the air and manner of an offended, outraged—but I had better not use any comparisons. but I had better not use any comparisons.

At another time, when traveling by rail through Virginia, a lady and her daughter entered the cars. It was night. I had a supportable corner-sent, and having already traveled thirty-six hours, was very tired and sleepy. Madam stood before me, imperiously waiting for me to move.

"Will you give up your seat to us, sir?"
(There were other seats in the car.)
Silently, I bowed a "No."

"You are not a gentleman, sir."
"I am not, madam, only a weary traveler."
At the next station, a colored woman with an infant came in. She made no fuss, and I promptly gave her my seat.

The old-fashioned (called by some, aristocratic,) rule, strongly enforced on our minds by our mothers, was: "Be polite to a wo-man whether she wear a crown or dress in rags," (in Europe, we know nothing about prejudice against color), "and deal with all kinds of men, kings included, as you like." The idea being that men can arrange their own matters of behavior with each other. I religiously observe my mother's teaching toward all true women.

ANTI-NAPOLEONIC RIOT AT GENEVA.—A Paris correspondent writes as follows: "Dur-ing the sojourn of the Emperor at Thonon, ing the sojourn of the Emperor at Thonon, large numbers of excircionists, from the neighboring Swiss cant ans, and particularly from Geneva, cance to witness the fetes. Out of this circumstance, an exciting incident subsequently occurred at Geneva, on the return to that city, of the persons who had visited Thonon. The steamer which brought them, arrived between ten and eleven o'clock. An immense crowd had assembled at the An immense crowd had assembled at the landing, and the appearance of the first among the passengers, was the signal for a storm of hisses and epithets, which must have disagreeably surprised the objects of this demonstration of Swiss popular political resentment against Napoleon III. 'Look at the lick-spittles!' shouted the mob. 'The valets!' Shame on them!' &c., &c.

"The tumult had already lasted aquarter of an hour, and the scene was growing more and more exciting, when, as if to add fuel to the flame, a man came on shore carrying a box inclosing the French flag, which had been used by the excursionists. Nothing of the tri-color itself was to be seen; but the protruding end of the staff betrayed the contents of the box, and the unlucky bearer was at once exposed to the indignation of the crowd, who yelled down with the flag! Down with the traitor!"—and rushed upon the victim. Fortunately, at this moment, a police commissary, followed by several gendarmes, with drawn sabers, appeared on the spot, and after considerable difficulty, succeeded in extricting the flag-bearer from the clutches of the mob, and protected his retreat to the police-office, near by. A large number of the rioters assembled in front of the office, uttering all sorts of imprecations and angry menaces. The commissary appeared on the below the commissary appeared on the commissary appeared to the commissary appeared the commissary appeared to the comm "The tumult had already lasted a quarter of the office, uttering all sorts of imprecations and angry menaces. The commissary appeared on the balcony and addressed the people, explaining to them the serious consequences which might result from their demonstrations, and Mr. James Fazy added a few energetic remarks, exhorting those present to commit no further imprudence, which had the happy effect of putting an end to the disturbance."

RATIONALISM IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND. The last number of the Christian Observer, of England, has a review of the latest vol-of England, has a review of the latest volume of Ozford Essays, in which it compares the opinions of Theodore Parker with those of the Essayists. After drawing the comparison in detail, it says:

Enough then has been given to show that in all the characteristic features of their system. Theodore Parker, in 1847 and in 1850, Francis William Newman, in 1850, and the Seven Essayists, in 1860, are all in harmony.
In language—Indeed, in freeness of tone and expression—there is just the difference which might be expected between men, who, like Parker and Newman, have thrown off all conventional bondage; and those, who, like the Seven Essayists, are Professors in Oxford, or Vice-Principals, or head masters of colleges or schools, or incumbents of parishes leges or schools, or incumbents of parishes in the Established Church. But while there is this difference in the tone and freedom of expression, there is none in actual creed.
All are agreed, the even as well as the two,
in rejecting "supernaturalism," in placing conscience above the Bible, and in throwing strong-there out of sight the altogether out of sight the grand topies o God's word, the introduction of sin, and the gift of a Savior man's rain, and man's re-demption. Our conviction is, that none of them have any real faith in either the one or the other of these great truths.

Dyspersia and its Supposed Remedical Journal, has no faith in bran bread, rye bread, &c., as remedies in dyspensia. They are commonly supposed to exert a good feeling by keeping the bowels open by their mechanical effect of irritation; but it is an abauth idea to give indigestible bran to a stomach already weakened, and whose complaint is that it can not digest. Bran and other mechanical irritants, though they may relieve the constipation, are not remedial, and only afford a present relief of one symptom, purchased at the risk of aggravating the real difficulty. Dr. Tucker believes that cold and stale wheat-bread is the most digestible, and, therefore, the best.

The population of England is about 27,500,000, of whom only 48,000 are proprietors of the soil.
